

The method of estimating the efficiency of the overlay network clustering in the swarms of peer-to-peer networks is proposed. The brief overview of the locality metric as a topological distance substitute is given and using re-gional Internet registries as information sources for constructing the structural model of the network is substantiated.

Key words: Internet, distributed networks, peer-to-peer networks, locality, clustering.

Full article